

Cory Saul Residence

2410 Keene St. Houston TX
77009

Bird-friendly Gardening Day

2025

Prioritizing biodiversity has led to many notable insect and bird sightings, as well as exciting volunteer flora. The design of the garden is responsive to microclimates yet as fluid and wild as the plants that inhabit it. The gravel path borders, which are made of broken concrete and bricks, were sourced from the site itself.

2410 Keene St is a native plant and kitchen garden in Near Northside. The home belongs to a horticulturist at Houston Botanic Garden, so the garden is a never ending project of spontaneous and imperfect experimentation. Notable spaces include the streetside drainage ditch, which has been re-wilded with Gulf Coast Prairie plants, the greenscreen thicket on the south side of the lot, the live oak canopy with epiphytes, and the cactus mounds.

